Mayor advocates “kindness from strangers” as a way to solve City financial crisis

We don't make this stuff up.

Click here to see the Voice of San Diego link to the “Drunk Landlord” analogy of our city government, and, specifically the quote from the Mayor's office saying that it is “completely logical and reasonable to ask the Chargers to partake in that cost” – “this is just asking for kindness from strangers.”

Well, if we got Elmer to call Earl, and Earl called Billy Bob, and Billy Bob called Clyde, and everyone asked a stranger for “a little kindness for our troubles,” purdy dern soon we'd have this whole mess cleaned up.

For a brief clarification of “who” is in charge at city hall, click here.
